

Global Water Issues and Changes in Water Resources Management Policies

Ömer Faruk Bilbay
Mustafa Kemal University
Turkey
bilbay1987@hotmail.com

Veysel Eren
Mustafa Kemal University
Turkey
bilbay1987@hotmail.com

Yakup Bulut
Mustafa Kemal University
Turkey
bilbay1987@hotmail.com

Abstract: Water is a very important natural resource for both sustain of universe and whole live life. Water has maintained its importance throughout history and it had played effective role on emerging and developing of many civilizations. Today, such a fast growing world population, global warming, decreasing of water resources, high cost of alternative fresh water, unconsciously and primitive farming irrigation, wasting urbanization which out of order, water pollution because of industry waste and another problems has been emerged. This situation has made water resources management as an international discussion both aspect of politic and economic.

Deficiencies in the amount and quality of water have been considered to be a threat both people and live species. . Therefore, nowadays the basis of the sustainability of water resources has become more important and necessity. In addition to national and international actors non-governmental organizations take on an important role in this regard the importance of the future path of the water with carrying out the support of the financial incentive, conferences, decisions, projects and they have demonstrated that how fresh resources water will be very important for the future of life. In this study we will examine reason of global water problems, sustainable water resources management, the transformations and changes in water resources policies and give advices about solution.

Keywords: Water Resources, Water Politics, Water Problems, Sustainability, Water Management, Global Warming.

